Cited as typical examples of the workers' reactions to the Hungarian Government's new policy are the following incidents:

1. Early in the morning on Sunday, 5 July 1953, the manager of an estate belonging to the sheep-breeding undertaking (Uritartó Vállalat) in Somogy County was awakened and asked to dress quickly and go outside. It transpired that during the night the coachmen had divided the estate horses among themselves and, being now about to divide up the sheep, wanted to know how many of these they should set aside for him.
2. On about 13 July 1953 all workers in the Soroksári ut plant of the Metal Goods Factory (formerly Lampart) in Budapest were bidden to a meeting at which one of the speakers, an elderly workman, got up and called Rákosi a scoundrel and a swindler, which raised a storm of applause. No punitive measures have been taken against this man by the beginning of August 1953.
